1045 Large Ornate Moorish Chandelier by Chaplin

This exquisite hanging lantern is a masterclass in Islamic-style metalwork, likely originating from Morocco or Egypt. It features intricate silver-toned wire filigree and pierced metal panels that would cast mesmerizing geometric shadows when lit. The piece is further elevated by a decorative circular ceiling cap adorned with golden foliate accents and inset with turquoise and coral-colored cabochons. The craftsmanship suggests a mid-20th-century production, blending traditional Moorish aesthetics with grand proportions. The item appears to be in good vintage condition; there is visible surface oxidation (patina) consistent with age, and some minor dust accumulation with delicate filigree work. Measurements are approximately 30" diameter and drops between 5' to 6' from the ceiling. Please use photos to judge condition and bid accordingly. Please note: Buyer is responsible for removal. From the Hollywood Blvd. Cinemas Collection. 500.00 - 10,000.00

1091 James Dean Fairmount News Spec Ed Reprint Oct '55

This is a reprint of the "Special Edition" of The Fairmount News from October 1955, headlined "James Dean Killed As Result Of California Car Accident." The reprint features the iconic image of Dean in his own hometown of Fairmount, Indiana, as a pinnacle for fans of the "Rebel Without a Cause." This specific paper features the iconic image of Dean and includes a "James Dean Exhibit" card from the Fairmount Historical Museum. Unlike national publications, this local paper, albeit a reprint, represents the immediate reaction of James Dean's own community in Fairmount, Indiana, following his fatal accident on September 17, 1955. The paper is housed in a simple black frame. The Fairmount Historical Museum, located at East Washington Street in Dean's hometown, is the official repository for the actor's personal effects. This specific newspaper was likely sold at the museum's gift shop or displayed as part of their "Museum" (the annual James Dean Festival held every September). 1109 Large Chinese Theatre Neon Sign Opened as Grauman's Chinese Theater in 1927, known as the iconic theater in Hollywood with "the top" Chinese architecture, famous movie premieres, hand and foot prints of legendary movie stars set in concrete, and host of the Academy Awards in 1945, 46, and 47. The Chinese Theater is ubiquitous with Hollywood. The theater has changed several times over the years with owners including Ted Mann in 1973 who renamed it Mann's Chinese Theater, and a Warner Bros. / Paramount partner in 2000. In 2002 the theater underwent a major restoration, returning it to as near original in appearance as possible. This neon sign was one of the "Chinese" neons that were mounted on the exterior of the left and right wings of the theater. This neon is from the right wing. It was removed during the 2002 renovation and sold with other architectural elements to the Hollywood Blvd Cinema in Woodland which was undergoing a major expansion adding a lobby and several more auditoriums. It is in good overall condition with untested neon and measures 6' wide X 6' tall. From the Hollywood Blvd. Cinema collection. Please note that the buyer is responsible for removal.

1110 Antique Gilded Wood Dragon Cloud Plaque

This masterfully executed high-relief carving features a dynamic, five-clawed Imperial dragon winding through a dense field of stylized "ruyi" clouds. While the verdigris-style patina in the recessed areas mimics bronze, the substrate is likely a dense, high-quality wood carved with exceptional detail—from the intricate scales of the serpentine body to the flared nostrils and flowing whiskers of the dragon's head. The scalloped cloud-form border suggests this was an architectural medallion, possibly originating from a grand temple interior in the late 19th to early 20th century. The piece is in good antique condition, showing age-appropriate thinning of the gold leaf on high-contact points and a rich, dusty oxidation that enhances its dimensional depth. No major structural splits or missing elements are visible. Measurements: H 21.5", W 21.5", D 2.5" Please use photos to judge condition and bid accordingly. Collection features five vintage wooden architectural corbels, likely salvaged from a mid-20th-century "palace" or a high-end Hollywood Regency interior design leans heavily into the Exotic Revival style—specifically Chinoiserie—consistent with the aesthetic found in iconic venues like Grauman's Theatre or the West Coast Theatre in Long Beach. These corbels feature a bold coral-red and gold-gilt paneling accented by recessed black panels, reflecting the 1920s–1940s obsession with "Orientalist" grand construction. The solid wood has a textured, layered finish. Given the varied sizing (two large and three small), these were likely part of a graduated architectural run along a balcony or structural beam. They remain in solid salvage condition, showing expected surface wear, minor paint losses to the pigment, and light chips to the gold-leaf edges that lend them an authentic vintage character. 1116 Pair Red Sconces (Hollywood)

These striking wall-mounted lanterns feature a classic Moorish or Moroccan influence, characterized by elegant keyhole-arched windows and intricate silver metalwork. The frames appear to be crafted from silver-toned metal, likely tinned brass or pewter, which has developed a heavy, darkened patina over time. Interestingly, these have been updated or constructed with modern red LED panels, providing a consistent and vibrant atmospheric glow. The craftsmanship, featuring pierced bases and repoussé detailing, suggests a Middle Eastern revival style. Both units show typical signs of age and use. Measurements 11" x 9.5" x D 4". This impressive gilded dragon carving embodies "Hollywood Chinoiserie" style synonymous with the 1927 Grauman's Chinese Theatre. While the most famous dragons in the theater are the massive 30-foot exterior stone relief and the 40-foot neon marquee figures, the interior was originally adorned with hundreds of smaller, hand-carved, and gilded decorative elements. This piece, featuring a right-facing Imperial dragon clutching a pearl amidst charcoal-colored stylized clouds, matches the high-relief aesthetic used in the theater's mezzanine and "VIP" lounge areas. It is crafted from a heavy wood or dense architectural composite with a rich gold-leaf or high-quality metallic finish. The item shows authentic age-related wear, including minor thinning of the gilding on high points and light surface scuffs, consistent with a salvaged architectural element from a mid-century renovation. dark wood panels, framed by beams painted with delicate red and green patterns. The Frieze: The exterior perimeter (the "fascia") features a continuous, hand-carved scrolling wave or cloud pattern in a reddish-gold tone. Lattice Work: Above the carved frieze sits a decorative wooden screen with a repeating diamond-shaped lattice (interlocking quatrefoils). Lighting & Hardware: Lanterns: Six wired electrical-patinaed green metal lanterns hang from the ceiling beams. They feature a hexagonal octagonal silhouette with intricate fretwork cut-to allow light to filter through, capped with a traditional pagoda-style "roof" on each lamp. Construction: The structure uses traditional post-and-beam joinery, designed to be a self-supporting architectural installation. Decorative Accents: Color Palette: The object uses a "jewel tone" palette dominated by cinnabar red, forest green, royal blue, and accents of gold leaf. Ornate Hand-Carved Indo-Persian Archway: This magnificent example of architectural salvage, likely hailing from Northern India or a similar Indo-Persian region. This massive archway and door set feature breathtaking Jali (lattice) work throughout the panels and doors. The piece is constructed from wood and boasts vibrant, hand-painted polychrome accents in deep reds, blues, and greens, further elevated by extensive gold gilt-work. You'll notice the traditional scalloped arch and floral carvings (likely lotus or peony motifs) that suggest a late 19th to early 20th-century craftsmanship. The doors still retain their original heavy brass ring pulls. In terms of condition, the piece shows a lovely, authentic patina with expected "alligatoring" or crackling to the paint and gesso, scattered chips to the wood carvings, and some fading to the gilt, all of which confirm its age and historical character. Each column measures 88" tall and each column 32" square and mirrored by a column capital of the same dimensions. The entire structure is approximately 11 feet wide by 30 feet long. 1143 2 Pillar Pagoda Cover

Massive Chinoiserie Cinema Archway
This impressive architectural installation is a prime example of "Movie Palace" Chinoiserie, designed to capture the opulence of the Great Hollywood era. The structure features a grand pagoda-style roof adorned with dragon finials and a central openwork dragon motif, all rendered in a vibrant palette of imperial red, turquoise, and gold. The two supporting columns, each measuring 115" in diameter, showcase fluted red shafts and intricate floral capitals that transition into a stepped, foliate-carved base. Likely commissioned for a theater lobby or a themed commercial venue, this archway reflects the 20th-century Western fascination with Eastern aesthetics rather than authentic Tibetan traditional Chinese architecture. The construction appears to be a robust mix of wood and composite materials. Condition is objectively good, displaying scattered paint chips, minor scuffs on the columns, and typical edge wear consistent with a large-scale decorative fixture. H 115", W 90", D 36". LOT #1149 Carved Polychrome Wooden Entrance w/Gated Fence

A monumental architectural set featuring a green-painted, hand-carved facade and an integrated red-painted gated fence. The style is a high-drama interpretation of Chinoiserie, popular in early 20th-century theater and estate design, detailed intricate dragon motifs and fierce guardian mask wooden façade includes four structural columns arched, scalloped header, while the lower section consists of a red-painted frame with heavy brass iron lattice work. This assembly likely served as grand interior entrance or partition. The "rear" of the piece is uniquely finished with additional metal and decor, suggesting it was intended for visibility from all angles. Condition is consistent with age theatrical use; there is significant paint chipping visible wood separation in the joints, surface oxidation on the metalwork, and various scuffs and minor losses to the carved elements. 1150 Ornate Hand-Carved Indo-Persian Archway

A magnificent example of architectural salvage, hailing from Northern India or a similar Indo-Persian region. This massive archway and door set feature breathtaking Jali (lattice) work throughout the panels and doors. The piece is constructed from solid wood and boasts vibrant, hand-painted polychrome accents in reds, blues, and greens, further elevated by extensive gold gilt-work. You'll notice the traditional scalloped arch and floral carvings (likely lotus or peony motifs) that suggest a late 19th to early 20th-century craftsmanship. The doors still retain their original heavy brass ring pulls. In terms of condition, the piece shows a lovely, authentic patina with expected "alligatoring" or crackling to the paint and gesso scattered chips to the wood carvings, and some fading to the gilt, all of which confirm its age and historical character. 1151 Tibetan Mahakala Thangka Silk Brocade

This striking Tibetan Thangka depicts a wrathful deity, likely Mahakala, the protector of Dharma, rendered in traditional "black thangka" (nagpa) style with great detailing. The central figure is surrounded by a fierce mandorla and flanked by lineage masters and deities in the upper and lower registers. The piece is framed in classic multi-colored silk brocade mounting featuring imperial dragon motifs, typical of 20th-century Himalayan liturgical art. The textile shows age-related rippling, minor fraying at the edges, and light surface dust, though the central imagery remains vibrant. H 43", W 32" Please use photos to judge condition and bid accordingly. Please note: Buyer is responsible for removal. From the Hollywood Blvd. Cinemas Collection. 500.00 - 10,000.00

1152 Tibetan Thangka Avalokiteshvara Scroll

This stunning Tibetan Thangka depicts a multi-armed deity, likely a form of Avalokiteshvara (Chenreng), seated upon a lotus throne and surrounded by a celestial mandorla. The central figure is flanked by smaller buddhas or deities in the upper corners and four seated practitioners or disciples at the base. The piece is executed in the traditional style with hand-painted pigments on a textile substrate, professionally mounted within a heavy, dark silk brocade border featuring ornate gold-threaded floral and "shou" longevity motifs. The age appears to be 19th to early 20th century, though the delicate pigments show significant wear. The piece exhibits notable condition issues consistent with age and devotional use, including heavy surface abrasion, pigment loss across the central figure, creasing of the silk, and overall fading of the imagery. 1267 Large Copper Cauldron

This monumental 19th or 20th century copper cauldron is a quintessential piece of early American or European farmstead history. While the size suggests use as an apple butter kettle, a seasoned eye will appreciate the industrial-grade construction: the heavy iron swing handles are secured with massive hand-set copper rivets, and the rolled rim provides the structural rigidity necessary for such a high-capacity piece. The presence of subtle irregularities in the rim and the manually peened rivets are strong indicators of period craftsmanship. The condition commensurates with a century of hard labor, featuring a rich, dark "fire-scale" patina on the exterior, scattered dents, surface pitting, and significant oxidation. Despite the rugged aesthetic, the copper remains remarkably thick and the iron hardware is securely attached. H 24", W 36", D 36". Please use photos to judge condition and bid accordingly. 1270 Egyptian Revival Polychrome Resin Stele

This grand-scale Egyptian Revival wall relief is expertly cast in resin to emulate the appearance of ancient weathered limestone. The piece captures the iconic New Kingdom aesthetic, featuring a winged sun disk above a ceremonial register of four figures—including deities and a pharaoh—flanked by royal cartouches. The lower half is densely packed with simulated hieroglyphic inscriptions, all finished with a distressed polychrome palette of terracotta, teal, and ochre. While designed to look like a heavy archaeological find from a temple site, the resin construction allows for a more manageable display than solid stone. The condition is excellent for a decorative cast, showing intentional factory-style distressing, minor surface scuffs, and a small chip along the simulated "cracked" edges that blend into the ancient aesthetic. 1307 Antique Chinese Wood 60th Birthday Plaque

This significant Republic-era (circa 1928) Chinese horizontal celebratory plaque, known as a Bian, is a masterful example of honorific woodcarving. The plaque features gilded characters, "Er Shun Di Ling", which directly celebrate the "Age of the Obedient Ear," an idiom reference to a 60th birthday, while wishing for "successive years of longevity." The right-side inscription identifies the recipient as a "Venerable Elder" and marks the date as a "Dragon Year", likely 1928. The left-side text lists the family or community donors who presented the gift. Crafted with a black lacquer ground and high-relief carving, it features traditional Wufu (Five Bats) motifs for good fortune and a central Shou (longevity) medallion. This striking high-relief wall hanging captures the ornate spirit of mid-20th-century Chinoiserie design, styled to resemble an imperial Chinese portrait. The figure, likely a composite or cast resin material with a metallic gilt finish, features traditional courtly elements like a long beard, ceremonial beads, and a (good fortune) symbol overhead. While designed with an aged aesthetic, the construction and mounting suggest a decorative mid-century or later reproduction rather than an ancient artifact. The piece is in good decorative condition, showing only minor surface scuffing to the gilt finish and light dust in the crevices of the relief. Measures approx 39" x 50" x 2.5". 1322 2nd Level Gold-Finished Imperial Guardian Lion (R)

A classic and auspicious representation of a Chi Guardian Lion, or "Shi," likely of 20th-century manufacture. This piece captures the traditional "male" form, depicted with his right paw resting on a patterned silk ball, representing supremacy over the world and protection of the structure. The figure is cast in stone/concrete with intricate "snail" curls in the mane and a decorative chest ribbon with tassels, finished in a bright gold-toned wash over a heavy composite or metal base to emulate traditional bronze. The craftsmanship follows the ornate Qing dynasty style frequently seen in architectural statuary. This item shows visible surface wear, with significant flaking and loss of the gold finish on the base and lower extremities, exposing a darker substrate. There is some accumulated dust in the recessed carving and minor pitting consistent with age and display. Measures 22" x 10" x 13". Please use photos to judge condition and bid accordingly. This is a classic 1940s-era black and white silver publicity photograph featuring the charming Hollywood starlet Jean Porter. Dressed in a sleek period style, Porter is captured in a playful "cheesecake" pose, a staple of Golden Age cinema marketing. The photo is hand-signed in bold black ink: "To Hollywood Jean Porter", Porter (1922–2018)

was a classic "ingénue" of the 1940s, appearing in nearly 50 films and TV series. She frequently worked with MGM and RKO, starring alongside icons like Li'l Bit and Esther Williams. She was also famously married to Edward Dmytryk, the Oscar-nominated director and member of the "Hollywood Ten." The photo is housed in a contemporary black tiered wooden frame with a glass front. The item appears to be in excellent vintage condition with no visible foxing or silvering on the image; the frame shows only minor storage marks at the edges. H 11", W 9", D 1"

This lot features a striking four-piece architectural salvage set, likely part of a grand interior doorway or theater set design reflecting a mid-century Chinoiserie style. The collection includes two tall vertical pilasters, a beautifully carved scrolling arch header, and a decorative faux-brass wooden grate. The wood surfaces are a deeply distressed cinnabar red with a heavy, crackle texture that evokes a sense of aged antiquity, while the carved elements and grate feature metallic gold-tone accents. The decorative header displays traditional fretwork motifs, and the grate is meticulously detailed with floral medallions and a geometric lattice pattern. Generally, the set shows heavy cosmetic wear consistent with age and previous installation, including significant paint flaking, surface abrasions, and loss to the finish on the structural planks; the decorative grate and arch remain largely intact.
